Gateway to Palace of Light, Lucknow The Palace of the Kings of Oudh, whose years of disgraceful misrule culminated in the annexation of the province by the British in 1856. 1857 was the tragic year of the Indian Mutiny, when Lucknow was linked inseparably with the names of Henry Lawrence, "who tried to do his duty," as his simple tomb modestly claims, of Havelock and Outram and Colin Campbell and other loyal-hearted heroes, whose dauntless courage upheld the honour of England and illuminated that dark hour with glory.
